OPMANTEK ANNOUNCES SAN FRANCISCO CORPORATE HEADQUARTERS

Thursday, 20th July 2017

Opmantek are set to increase their foothold on the US market with the establishment of a new corporate headquarters in San Francisco and the welcoming of Craig Nelson as CEO to head up global sales efforts.

Craig joins Opmantek from a senior executive role with Ixia, a global leader in network security solutions that was recently acquired for US$1.6B.

Opmantek Chairman, Danny Maher said that the appointment of a new CEO is an expansionary move fueled by a desire to have executive leadership closer to Opmantek's customers, partners and potential funders.

"I am really excited about this new phase of growth. The appointment of a new CEO will free up more of my time to work even harder on the things we need to grow the company and will provide the company with a greater capability to deliver new strategies and plans."

Opmantek products have seen steady gains in popularity in the US and Americas over the past 5 years and with the transition to subscription based licensing, the uptake of software in their key market of Managed Service Providers (MSP's) has increased dramatically.
